IMPORTANT CME NOTICE

Dear HPIX Subscriber,

As a HPIX subscriber, you are already aware of our dedication to risk management, reducing exposure to claims, and improving quality of care.

Since 2003, HPIX has provided our subscribers with high quality CME programs at no cost. Over the last two years, many new, free Internet based resources have become available that meet the need for ongoing clinical and risk management CME.

HPIX has researched and can recommend a number of high quality, free CME resources that are fully accredited by the American Council on Continuing Medical Education (ACCME). These include:

Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality <http://webmm.ahrq.gov/cme.aspx>

Medscape Education <http://www.medscape.org/medscapetoday>

Please be aware that in addition to the above, HPIX offers risk management programs such as on-site risk assessments conducted by a Certified Healthcare Compliance Officer, live presentations and educational series delivered by claims, risk management, legal and professional liability insurance professionals.

The increasing availability of quality, no-cost CME online programs presents an opportunity for HPIX to refocus on its additional risk management service offerings. Beginning January 1, 2012, HPIX will no longer develop new content for our CME On-Line program. Our current on-line library will be available to you through the ACCME expiration date. Following their expiration, these courses will be available to you as free resources through the HPIX Internet site, www.hpix-ins.com.

Beginning January 1, 2012, HPIX will offer internet links to the free CME resources listed above. The HPIX Risk Management program will increase our focus on providing on-site Risk Assessments, developing articles, live educational sessions and webcasts on emerging risk issues, and responding to individual requests for guidance on typical medical practice areas of risk.
